excellent differences, of very ſoft ſociety, and great ſhowing: indeede to ſpeake feelingly of him, he is the card or kalender of Gentry: for you ſhall finde in him the continent of what part a Gentleman would ſee.

Ham. Sir, his definement ſuffers no perdition in you, though I know to devide him inuentorially, would dizzie th'arithmeticke of memory, and yet but raw neither, in reſpect of his quick ſaile, but in the verity of extolment, I take him to be a ſoule of great article, and his infuſion of ſuch dearth and rareneſſe, as to make true dixion of him, his ſemblable is his mirrour, and who els would trace him, his vmbrage, nothing more.

Cour. Your Lordſhip ſpeakes moſt infallibly of him.

Ham. The concernancy ſir, why do wee wrap the Gentleman in our more rawer breath?

Cour. Sir.

Hora. Iſt not poſſible to vnderſtand in another tongue, you will doo't ſir really.

Ham. What imports the nomination of this Gentleman?

Cour. Of Laertes.

Hora. His purſe is empty already, all's golden words are ſpent.

Ham. Of him ſir.

Cour. I know you are not ignorant.

Ham. I would you did ſir, yet in fayth if you did, it would not much approoue me, well ſir.

Cour. You are ignorant of what excellence Laertes is.

Ham. I dare not confeſſe that, leaſt I ſhould compare with him in excellence, but to know a man well, were to know himſelfe.

Cour. I meane ſir for this weapon, but in the imputation layd on him by them in his meed, hee's vnfellowed.

Ham. What's his weapon?

Cour. Rapiar and Digger.

Ham. That's two of his weapons, but well.

Cour. The King ſir hath wagerd with him ſix Barbary horſes againſt the which he has impaund as I take it ſix french Rapiers and Poynards, with their aſsignes, as girdle, hanger and ſo. Three of the cariages in faith, are very deare to fancy, very reſponſiue to the hilts, moſt dilicate carriages, and of very liberall conceit.

Ham. What call you the carriages?

Hora. I knew you muſt be edified by the margent ere you had done.

done.

Cour. The carriage ſir are the ha

Ham. The phraſe would be more could carry a Cannon by our ſides, then, but on, ſix Barbary horſes 'aga ſignes, and three liberall conceited against the Daniſh, why is this all y

Cour. The King ſir, hath laid ſir, your ſelfe and him, hee ſhall not exc layd on twelue for nine, and it wou your Lordſhippe would vouchſafe t

Ham. How if I anſwere no?

Cour. I meane my Lord the opp

Ham. Sir I will walke heere in th is the breathing time of day with m Gentleman willinge, and the Kin for him and I can, if not I will gain odde hits.

Cour. Shall I deliuer you ſo?

Ham. To this effect ſir, after wh

Cour. I commend my duty to yo

Ham. Yours doo's well to com tongues els for's turne.

Hora. This Lapwing runnes aw

Ham A did ſo ſir with his dugg many more of the ſame breede that onely got the tune of the time, an kind of miſty collection, which car the moſt prophane and trennowned them to their tryall, the bubbles ar

Enter a Lo

Lord. My Lord, his Maieſty co Oſtricke, who brings backe to him hee ſends to know if your pleaſure you will take longer time:

Ham I am conſtant to my purp ſure, if his fitnes ſpeakes, mine is re uided I be ſo able as now.

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE Hamlet (STC 22277) LONDON, 1611 THE BODLEIAN LIBRARY (Arch. G e. 13